

This map is a compilation of the biotech industry's effort to rid the world of COVID-19.

Our visualization aims to convey not only individual innovations from specific companies but also the collective effort and sheer scale of the entire industry. The legacy of COVID-19 will hopefully include not only new treatments for an acute viral illness but also a greater appreciation of what society can accomplish when we unite against a common foe. We've already achieved remarkable innovations in many areas, including hepatitis C, HIV, melanoma, breast cancer, and other diseases. Now, we must continue to do the same for COVID-19.

The Great American Drug Deal

The Biotech-Pharma Contract, as described in The Great American Drug Deal, shows that we do not have to choose between innovation and affordability. We as a society can rise to the challenge of tackling human diseases just as we have COVID-19, making investments that will permanently upgrade our health and that of future generations.
